

Join PETA in Asking the Australian Government to Eliminate the Worst Abuses That Sheep Suffer in the Hands of the Wool Industry

While we take no position in support or against any candidate for public office, we are calling on public officials such as John Howard and Mark Latham to take action now to avoid an international boycott of Australian wool by putting an end to mulesing and to the live export of sheep.

Year after year, millions of sheep suffer during mulesing and live export in the Australian wool industry. These practices have been shown to cause excruciating pain and often death, proving that no degree of standards or "improvements" can ensure the welfare of animals who are subjected to them and that the only compassionate solution is a ban on both.
